

Housing Hub – a new way to advertise disability accommodation

Notes from Vince Patton of the Summer Foundation

The Housing Hub is bringing the concept of a mainstream housing search to disability accommodation. Just like realestate.com, it shifts power into the hands of providers and consumers.

People with disability will be able to see and search through a range of housing options, including group homes, new build SDA and community housing. For those who now have NDIS plans, it might mean thinking about living independently for the first time.

Through The Housing Hub, providers will be able to engage with a range of potential tenants that were not easily reached before, including tenants from interstate as The Housing Hub goes live across Australia. Advertising on The Housing Hub not only reaches additional tenants, it also gives visibility in new markets.

The Housing Hub in South Australia

With the rollout of the NDIS, the SA Government is stepping out of accommodation placement services for people with disability. To help the transition, DHS is sponsoring listings on The Housing Hub for all South Australian disability housing providers.

This means that advertising vacancies on The Housing Hub for SDA group homes, new build SDA, community housing and other housing opportunities for people with disability will be FREE until the end of 2018.

Training sessions will be held shortly to help you learn how to use The Housing Hub and get the most out of your property listings. Look out for a session in your area soon, or contact The Housing Hub for further details:
